Exhibit 5 Brief Bios of Select Senior Officers

Thomas C. MacMillan was president and chief executive officer of CIBC Mellon. He had 35 years of extensive experience in the financial services industry in both Canada and the United States. From 1994-1998, he was chairman, president and chief executive officer of Mellon Bank Canada. Mr. MacMillan was instrumental in the formation of the CIBC Mellon joint venture, and previously held various senior positions with the Bank of Montreal, Chase Manhattan Bank of Canada and Montreal Trust. A native of Toronto, Mr. MacMillan received a bachelor's degree from Princeton University and a master's degree from the London School of Economics and Political Science. He also had significant board experience in both the private and not-for-profit sectors.

Mark R. Hemingway was senior vice president, general counsel and chief compliance officer, and a member of the company's executive management committee. He was responsible for the legal, compliance, corporate secretarial and privacy functions at CIBC Mellon. Mr. Hemingway had 20 years of experience in the legal profession. Prior to joining CIBC Mellon, he held general counsel and corporate secretary positions in a number of large Canadian companies, and was previously a litigation lawyer at Torys. He received his law degree from Queen's University and his master of laws degree from Cambridge University. He articulated at the Supreme Court of Canada.

James E. R. Slater was senior vice president, capital markets, and a member of the company's executive management committee. Mr. Slater had overall leadership responsibility for CIBC Mellon's capital markets function, which included global securities lending, treasury and cash management. Mr. Slater's accountabilities also included providing strategic client service engagement in relation to his trading and financial markets responsibilities. He also chaired the company's asset liability committee. Mr. Slater had 20 years of experience in the financial services industry with CIBC World Markets and CIBC Mellon. While at CIBC World Markets, he was part of the team charged with the formation of CIBC Mellon.

C. Paul Marchand was the head of risk management. He joined CIBC Mellon in 2002, after 35 years with a major Canadian bank. At CIBC Mellon, he was responsible for designing and overseeing the company's Risk Management frameworks and programs for both CIBC Mellon Trust Company and CIBC Mellon Global Securities Services Company. His mandate included bringing together comprehensive oversight and reporting of all risk issues affecting CIBC Mellon including credit, market and operational risks up to and including the boards of directors and joint venture partners. He also served as the enterprises' chief compliance officer and chief anti-money laundering officer from 2002 to 2006. Marchand held a bachelor of commerce degree from McGill University.

David S. Linds was senior vice president, business development and client relationship management, and a member of the company's executive management committee. Mr. Linds also oversaw the company's product management and client integration solutions group, which was responsible for ensuring existing and future development of products and services as well as client reporting needs of institutional clients for asset servicing and ancillary services. Mr. Linds had more than 25 years of experience in the financial services industry, including 18 years with CIBC World Markets and CIBC Mellon. While at CIBC World Markets, he was part of the team charged with the formation of CIBC Mellon.

Robert M. Shier was senior vice president and chief operations officer, and a member of the company's executive management committee. Mr. Shier was responsible for CIBC Mellon's operational divisions, including client and investment management services, asset servicing, investment fund accounting for the CIBC Mellon Global Securities Services Company and investor services, stock transfer and employee plan administration for CIBC Mellon Trust Company. He joined CIBC Mellon in 1997, and had more than 25 years of operational experience in financial services including brokerage, banking, asset servicing and transfer agency services.
