

Healthcare Emergency Mgmt. 201902-2T-DMM-649-2

Discussion Board

Forum: Week 4 Discussion Board

Thread: Mansour Alkathami

Search
 Refresh

Thread: Mansour Alkathami

Select: All None

« « Thread 4 of 11 » »

Message Actions

Expand All

Collapse All

1 Post(s) in this Thread

0 Unread

Mansour Alkathami

Mansour Alkathami

2 days ago

Through the establishment of the joint commission, a good number of the organizations in society have been able to experience an improved emergency response to disasters. This has been brought about by the comprehensive emergency management strategies being employed by the commission (Wagner, McDonald, & Castle, 2012). Mainly being a joint commission, this is what it is to respond cum convalesce from tragedies. Despite the fact that there have been some benefits like improved actions such as ensuring the safety of the patient's physical self-indulgence application, so only being acquiescent to the commission is inadequate to effectively engage oneself in any preparations, responses, and recuperation on any sudden emergency. Therefore, one should focus on the organization's mission, customs, and dedication towards improving the security and quality of well being put into the account for disaster management. This commission agendas include certifying and offering the certificates to persons and health care centers, overseeing the performance rate cum the quality of services provided by the trained nurses (Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations., & Joint Commission Resources, 2006).

Among the works tasked to the joint commission is to ensure that nurses obtain quality skills on how to tackle emergencies, and also provide the requisite tools for use. For the joint international commission, operates in a broader network area. It provides tragedy sensors and ready to act devices. Its crusades are to educate the society on core safety regulations in case of any disaster. It assigns monetary to assist in all its businesses, more so it has worked hard on improving its technology to help in managing disasters. Hence, being compliant to all that pertains to the joint commission can be said to be sufficient in preparing, responding and recovering from tragedies, though one's personal commitment is also of concern when dealing with disasters.

The moral message echoing is being elucidative at all stages and ensuring that the patients live at precedence. Nurses are responsible for saving the lives of their clients who are patients. This kind of job needs one to develop the highest culture of morality when dealing with their customers. For satisfaction to be achieved, one must be transparent. Prioritizing the client's safety is another ethical lesson that has continuously been reappearing all through my educational stages. Deep down, heart, I realized that a good number of people's lives are dependent on the clients and when one loses a life, those who rely on the already dead end up suffering. Therefore, making sure to save one soul is like saving a million souls. This message really changed my perception when carrying out my duties as a medical practitioner.

It's of concern to me for those involved in disasters and don't receive quality care or are not well treated, placing myself in the same situation I realized that indeed there is an extraordinary and ordinary life. Therefore, giving the attention to all victims as I could expect to be done unto me was my point to focus on. This is because what one is undergoing today might be my problem tomorrow. Finally, all nurses must be and remain to be loyal in giving quality services to their clients since it's their core and responsibility (Joint Commission Resources, 2012).

References

Joint Commission Resources, Inc. (2012). Emergency management in health care:

Resources, Inc. (2006). Meeting the Joint Commission's 2007 National Patient Safety Goals. Oakbrook Terrace, IL: Joint Commission Resources.

Wagner, L. M., McDonald, S. M., & Castle, N. G. (2012).

Joint Commission Accreditation and Quality Measures in U.S. Nursing Homes. Policy, Politics, & Nursing Practice, 13(1), 8-16.

ReplyQuoteEmail Author

Select: All None

Message Actions

Expand All

Collapse All

← OK